OATS

High in fibre, they are known to lower Cholesterol, reduce hypertension and are there for great for heart health, prevention and treatment of diabetes, helps in weight loss, they are protein rich, boosting you immune system and energy levels and enterolactone found in oats acting as antioxidants help prevent cancer.

FLAX SEEDS

High in Omega-3 that prevents cholesterol from being deposited in the heart, rich in lignans reduces the risk of cancer, rich in dietary fibre, known to lower blood pressure, rich in amino acids, arginine, aspartic acid and glutamic acid, known to control blood sugar.

QUINOA

Considered a super food, Quinoa has antioxidant properties that help in protecting heart, liver, kidney, lungs and pancreas, it aids in weight loss, is a good source of proteins, regulates blood glucose levels, high in calcium content, helps digestion, one of the best sources of magnesium thus reducing the risk of osteoporosis and asthma.

CHIA

In Mayan and Aztec cultures. "Chia" means strength, and folklore has it that these cultures used the tiny black and white seeds as an energy booster. That makes sense, as chia seeds are a concentrated food containing healthy omega-3 fatty acids, carbohydrates, protein, fiber, antioxidants, and calcium.
